MISSION STUDY CLASS Makes Closing Session a Social Even

The Mission Study class of the First Congregational church closed its season's study with the completion of the reading of On the Prontier and a social evening at the home of Mrs. H. H. Sterry, 3 Lincoln place, Friday evening. The gathering might be termed a geographical party, as the entertainment dealt with many of the places of interest studied by the class the past winter. The decorations and favors were red, white and blue. At 9 o'clock the gentlemen—husbands of the members of the class—with Rev. W. S. Beard, arrived unexpectedly and enjoyed the balance of the evening with the ladles. A buffet lunch was served. The menu was characteristic of the various countries studied during the season. Mrs. Sterry was assisted in serving by Miss Mabel Stillman. The evening was a most delightful one fur all present. The party comprised the eleven ladles, four husbands and Rev. Mr. Beard.

the lake at South Coventry are much more serious than at first supposed, fourteen bungalows having been entered in all and a great deal of damage to property caused besides the foss by stealing of a large number of valuable articles. Each cottage was rifled to the extent of from $25 to $100 worth and in many instances the total loss has not yet been fully estimated. The case was placed in the hands of the state police Friday, when Town Clerk Frank P. Fenton called up Chief Egan at Hartford and acquainted him with the full seriousness of the breaks. Mr. Fanton himself lost some $50 to $75 worth of fishing tackle, to say nothing of the damake to his bungalow.

Mrs. Elizabeth H. Goetz to Speak. Mrs. Elizabeth Harlow Goetz will speak Sunday under the auspices of the First Spiritualist society of this city. The services will be held in the Woman's club hall. At the evening service Mr. Wallen of the Congregational quartette will sing two soles.

> OBITUARY. Edmond P. Kenyen.

(Contributed.)

Mr. Kenyon spent the first half of his life in Plainfield, where he was born, and in Providence. Then he lived in Brooklyn sixteen years, in Hartford seven and in Windham twenty-five, and there he died March 8th at the ripe old age of nearly 90 years. The following relatives survive him: His wife, whom he married sixty-six years ago, she being Ann Eliza Pew of Ithaca, N. Y., four children, R. P. Kenyon and George E. Kenyon of Hartford, William E. Kenyon, assistant postmaster at Fairbanks Alaska, and Emma J. Kenyon, living at Maplecroft, the home, four sisters, Mrs. Freelove Bakar of Davenport, Iowa, Mrs. Alva H. Tillinghast of Hartford and Mrs. Francis M. New England's industrial Revolution.

The emptyings of congressional oratory pouring forth in pest-session issues of the Record bring to hand an informing speech by Representative Hill of Connecticut, the subject being the reciprocity bill. He exhibits impressively the change in the economic life of New England within a period of two-thirds of a generation: a change recognized more or less vaguely by everybody. It is being reflected, of course, pretty much all over the country at the present time, but, in New England, it has progressed so far that the effects and consequences can be atudied in the courete. In the judgment of Mr. Hill here has occurred the "most remarkable industrial revolution ever made in the history of the world since Adam and Evewere driven from the Garden of Eden." A sailent item is that, in the period of twenty years between the census of 1880 and 1900, 15,344 farms in New England went out of existence. During the period of the diminishing local production of foodstons thus shown the population increased a million and one-half. While five million acres of land went out of tillage and cultivation more than twenty-five thousand factories sprang up in New England.—Providence Journal. New England's Industrial Revolution

The Bluejackets of 1911.

Few people appreciate the fact that ninety-six per cent. of the enlisted men today are American born, representing every state in the union. They have not been seafaring men but are young men of high intelligence from every walk in life. On warships, they are developed, according to their inclinations and ability, in electricity, machinery, gun, firing and all the requirements of a modern man of war. The navy increases their productive power for times of peace, and makes them a strong instrument for defence in time of war. The duties of the officers have also changed materially. The battleship fleet, which is the navy, and to which the country would look in time of trouble, is composed of chormous ships, which are floating power plants, full of complex machinery. Consequently, it is necessary that the officers should be versed in enjoyed the composed of the officers and that every officer must be a fighting engineer. To command machine shops requires technical knowledge, executive ability, mental training and a physical condition as nearly perfect as possible, in order to be able to stand the strain and responsibility.—Secretary Meyer. Pocket Guns and Belt Guns.

The absurdity of continuing to rely upon the concealed weapon prohibition as a means of preventing the misuse of firearms is illustrated by a case just reported from Long Branch, N. J. Having falled to secure a permit from the mayor of Seabright to carry a revolver a resident of that town has stuck a pistol in his belt and is parading the streets in that fashion. He declares that he has had threatening letters growing out of a bitter controversy between him and some of the other residents about a fence he erected across one of the public roads. Under the ordinances he cannot be molested, although he walks the streets in Wild West fashion, ready to shoot at a moment's notice. The only difference between his assumed right to arm himself and his legal authorization is that if he had secured the required permit he could have put the pistol in his pocket. Thus all the law has accomplished in this instance is to require him to carry the gun plainly in sight.

This may happen in any community where the only prohibition against gun earrying takes the form of a concealed weapon act or regulation. The theory upon which these ordinances are based is that a man with a gun in his pecket is more dangerous than a man with a gun in sight. It is in reality a relic of the old frontier days when the hidden weapon was considered as bad form and everybody who was anybody carried his arsenal in plain view, as a sufficient warning to all comers that he was ready for trouble.—Washington Star.

ECZEMA BEGAN IN PIMPLES WHEN TWO WEEKS OLD

"My little girl had ecrems on her face which first started to break out on her when she was two weeks old. It began in pimples, and would water and ltch. It was on the back of her neck in the edge of her hair, and in between her shoulders. But it was broken out the most on her face. I doctored with two different doctors, and they did not seem to help her. Then a cousin of mine recommenced the Cuticura Ramedles. She said they cured one of her children, so I tried them, and they give my child relief. I used a box of Cuticura Roap, and my little girl was completely cured. She is three years old now and has not a sign of ecsems. I have been keeping the Cuticura Cuticura Remedles are all right. I tell other people about them and how they cured my little girl."
